Unscathed Amin Pops Up at Meeting in Gabon

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) --Ugandan President Idi Amin today lifted all travel restrictions imposed a month ago on an estimated 300 Britons living in Uganda and said they were free to leave the country at any time, Radio Uganda reported.

Amin, meanwhile, made a dramatic appearance today at the start of the African summit in Libreville, Gabon, his

Resplendent in blue Air Force uniform, a pistol Force uniform, a pistol strapped to his side, Amin strolled into the $23 million copper-domed Conference Palace minutes before the start of the 49-nation summit of the Organization of African ganization's history, its lead-ers appeared determined to thrash out publicly their mulpossible back seat to such explosive issues as Rhodesta and South Africa.

Amin's arrival was startling because authorities in Uganda had been saying for days that he would not attend OAU's 14th summit.

The stocky field marshal and president-for-life showed no signs of the wounds he reportedly suffered during an assassination attempt two weeks ago in his capital of Kampala when dissident

Army and Air Force officers ambushed his limousine. In London, the Daily Mirror reported that a ranking Ugan-dan cabinet minister had defected in fear of his life and had brought with him new stories of massacres and atrocities under Amin's regime.

Air Canada Delay On Bumping Data

OTTAWA - Air Canada's official version of a possible racial incident at Ottawa In-ternational Airport a week ago may not be ready Monday, as originally promised.

The air line's public relations officer, Hugh Riopelle, who earlier gave assurances an explanation would be rea-died by Monday at latest, said Friday it might not available until late in the coming week.

Want a Job?

The meek shall inherit the earth who took at face value the fine and upone day, we are promised in the Bible. But in the here and now you'll never lack for employment if you're a Liberal and fought the good fight at election time

Some 200 Liberals who came to the aid of the party in federal elections and various provincial ballots and offered themselves to the voters as candidates have not gone unnoticed. Their dedication, sacrifice and hard work for the party, er country, were not for naught.

From Ahearn (Allie, wife of J. E. Ahearn, MLA for Halifax North in the Nova Scotia legislature for 10 years) to Yanosik (C. G., unsuccessful in Lethbridge riding in 1958), the rain of judgeships, immigration appeal board seats and unemployment insurance referee posts has been sweet and refreshing None of this is new or unexpected, but The Globe and Mail's compilation of Liberal patronage appointments (apart from the plummiest of plums, the Senate) over the last 10 years conveys as nothing else could the almost overwhelming advantage the Grits have at election time

Bagmen and organizers must have to beat off prospective candidates with a stick, since all know that running for the Liberals is a better guarantee of economic security than winning Loto Canada's million dollar Campbell and Newell Morrison to jobs first prize.

The story of Chris Brown seems typical. A member of the Fraser River harbor commission, he resigned in 1965 to run in New Westminster in the federal election that year, was defeated, reappointed and still sits on the commission.

Local worthies have not been neglected. Frances Elford, unsuccessful candidate in Victoria riding, is now a citizenship judge at $25,000 a year. Mel Couvelier, former candidate in Oak Bay provincial constituency, is chairman of the UIC board of referees in Victoria at $200 a

The practice should not shock or standing promises made by Prime Minister Trudeau upon taking office long ago in 1968. As the Globe notes, in quotation from a book about Louis Laurent: "Patronage is the udder of democracy." All politicians do it. What is repellent about the whole thing is the self-righteous attitude of opposition parties (who turn around and do exactly the same thing when they eventually form the government) and the weaselly justifications offered by the party in power. These are hypocrisy of the first magnitude. There was a fine example in the B.C.: legislature on Wednesday, as Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy defended Ed Sweeney, a former Social Credit candidate, against charges of pork barrelling in his appointment to a job as executive director of the Captain Cook bicenten-usually variations of: "He's the best man. She knows the field well. He's in touch with the community." This is nial committee. Of course not, said the minister. Sweeney was a man who had sacrificed much of his life to serve the public as alderman in Vancouver, PNE president, and so on. All perfectly valid observations, but Sweeney's, party affiliation didn't hurt his employment chances either. As it undoubtedly helped former MLAs Dan

Fresh in many minds are the stout and pure-hearted attacks made by these same men and women now in government upon the previous administration for doing the same thing they are now doing, that is, appointing their friends and fallen comrades to jobs in the government. Might there be a truce called on the subject in Federally, it is a little different. One could take the same realistic attitude except for one feature - nearly a third of the appointments for excandidates, ex-MLAs and former MPs were for positions on the bench.

This is a dangerous trend, when the judiciary should be independent of the executive arm of the government, free of partisan affairs and political considerations. Canada is proud of its judicial system, that it does not depend upon the unseemly and grubby election of judges, as the U.S. system does in many states. But when the end result is the same, when the government appoints numerous former politicians to the bench, how is it any different or better?

Immigration appeal boards, the tariff board, the unemployment insurance commission - these may be fair game for partisan appointments but the judiciary should be beyond the squalor of politics. It must be seen to be beyond politics.

But Folkfest Was Real

It was a facade, a show put on for the people of Victoria (and any passing tourists) by the provincial government, aided and abetted by a couple of advertising agencies. It was slick and it was professional, but it produced no real enthusiasm or involvement, any more than watching a well-done television commercial would one thing wrong with the rally held in Centennial Square Wednesday to mark the official kick-off of the Special Smile cam-

The Special Smile campaign is the creation of Tourism Minister Grace Mc-One Australian senator com- Carthy and is a province-wide affair. It is designed to encourage British Columbia to be nicer to tourists (an admirable goal) and involves Smile buttons (manufactured by the thousand), Smile placemats (printed in equal numbers), Smile rallies like the Centennial Square one in communities across the province, and various other activities

> In addition, individual communities, chambers of commerce and tourist-oriented businesses are being encouraged to extend the campaign in any ways they can think of. In a recent letter, McCarthy described some of the ideas that are tak> ing place:

> "Some municipalities and establishments have already 'gone the extra mile' by incorporating their own ideas such as a Special Smile Drink, Special Smile Pancakes, Smile Sales, and one community is even spelling out our theme, 'We Have a Special Smile for You' on painted rocks on a green embankment." (This last idea prompted one wag to suggest the cam paign should be renamed Grace's Deface

B.C. campaign.)

The minister's letter also suggested ways those of us in the media could help. The ideas ranged from the extremely ser sible — giving Fahrenheit temperatures as well as Celsius to help Americans who haven't converted yet — to the absurd — using the Smile logo as a backdrop to television news. (A second wag suggested the Smile logo might be terribly appropriate during news stories about such gloomy matters as inflation, unemployent and hostage-takings.)

The rally was described as a "mass collage of smiles and service" to show to the tourists. Some optimists predicted that as many as 2,000 workers in the hospitality industry might turn out, but it was dif ficult to find 200 there. Those who did come stood around for about 45 minutes, then had their pictures taken - smiling, of Appropriate speeches were made by Mayor Mike Young and Alan Emery, presi-dent of the chamber of commerce. Emery seemed 'particularly enthusiastic. The audience clapped politely. Girls passed out about 10. Eventually it came time for the entertainment — a mini-version of the traditional Jerry Gosley Smile Show.

Smile Rally Professional

Never was there any show of real interest on the part of the audience. Why should there be? This rally; this campaign, did not belong to them.

In great contrast was the program gong on in the other half of the square Folkfest '77. The folkfest is the annual festival of Victoria's ethnic groups and featured sales of traditional foods and handicrafts and entertainment in the form of traditional music and dancing. Folkfest is not slick nor particularly professional. The signs are often hand-lettered and the saleswomen (all volunteers) sometimes have to hurry off to get change to make a sale. Yet there is a feeling of genuine gaiety about it. These are some very real members of Victoria's community proud of their heritage and proud to show it both to other Victorians and to visitors. Enthusiasm, friendliness, smiles - all these are great for any city, not only to attract tourists but also to improve the city's own spirit. But perhaps for a Smile program to be a real success, it has to come from the heart of a community, not imposed by a senior government

The most genuine smiles this week were at the amateur Folkfest, not at the slick, professional rally. I think the tourists would enjoy the Folkfest more reflecting a prevailing European view that only the Europeans truly understand the energy situation and that North Americans are profligate and misguided.

The United States and President Jimmy Carter came in for a thorough whipping at this discussion.

While the Europeans have "accepted the situation with fatalism and realism as one speaker out it the Americans won't be willing to give up "their heating and cooling," said Lord Balogh, the deputy chairman of the British National Oil Cor

Well, coal might be one source.

Lord Balogh, who is perhaps more responsive to current public opinion in Bri tain as a government appointee and former minister, did express worry that a plutonium-powered world of the 21st century might be "extremely unpleasant.

Tragic Horror

tragic horror of the modern era. I quote J. of Victoria's letter to the "Doing away with an organism that threatens my well-being is none other than self defence." Organism seems, at best, a curious choice of words to define a human being. Moreover, many an organism, indeed, many a person, has threatened my well-being: neighbor friend, parent. Am I to, willy-nilly, do them in? Most situations in life can be dealt with, even unwanted pregnancy There is also the probability that this sup posedly unwanted child will not be the threatening creature imagined, but a source of strength, joy and spiritual growth to the woman carrying it. There is no right to choose. That right was ab dicated when the seed was planted. Therein lay the choice.

I have a child born of an unwanted pregnancy. I am all too familiar with the panic, the fear, the rage, the sense of entrapment of those first months. I am also familiar with those ready to say get

I take issue with the implication that feminism is somehow synonomous with abortion or the right thereto. To say that the single mother can expect only poverty and pity resulting from her state in life is simply not the case Whatever the prevalent mood of so today, it need not determine the fate of a parent raising children alone. One day it will dawn on most of us that caring for our children is as valid an occupation as being a bartender, a logger, a doctor, an office worker, a weaver or anything else. Until est single parents will experience poverty. Relatively few people today are free of that threat, but even today this need not be degrading or terrible. We can make it if we keep our wits about us and if

The legal issue of abortion is a moot question: The law, one way or the other, cannot fashion integrity. It is a sad, sad commentary on 20th century humankind that any one of us is compelled to say that, pregnancy requires that a woman "make survival judgments about her own body.

Are we so paranoid or inept that or otherwise productive members of pregnancy or a baby is assuredly more society? than we can handle? Is there nothing to be said for believing in each other - believing that one can make it through the pregnancy and, be it so decided, through motherhood, and make it with flying colors. Not even I myself am aware of m own strengths — why underestimate those

It is true that a pregnant woman is of to believe that she isn't up to momentous anyone who can should offer all beneficial support possible to a woman alone and egnant., Pro-lifers would do well to put their energy to serving this end.

Let us not pretend, however, that abortion is a service to women or that it is any kind of positive solution. It is an act born of desperation, ignorance and fear, and as such is destructive not only to that unborn child but also to the woman's own psyche -Peggy Salaberry, Sooke.

Baby Market

To serve the needs of people who want babies and people who don't want babies, why not set up a baby market? A law could be passed to make it legal to sell babies.

Besides the money the mother, after carrying her baby to term, would realize from the sale, jobs would be created. The whole economy would be given a lift, for staff would be needed to care for the babies while awaiting placement, and interviewers to speak with the prospective parents. The interview, of course, would be brief since it only concerns the life of a baby and therefore could be dealt with in

Given the strong desire of some would support almost any price put on the babies. After the mother received her share, and placement centre expenses were paid, there would still be money left. This could be used to defray the expense of abortions for those who prefer aborticide to family planning

For the babies who might not sell for one reason or another, institutions or group homes could be established. Millions are spent for the maintenance of people who commit crimes, and for other un fortunates. Why not millions for babies some of whom will be criminal or disadvantaged, others of whom will be geniuses from the sale of babies would be establish ment of a union, each unborn represented by an adult who would try to protect his or her rights, including the right to be born

One of the first objectives of the union would be to find some way that the unborn child could fight back when the team intent upon terminating his or her life approached. It is difficult to see how a small not fully mature human being could defend itself against adults armed with lethal ap paratus. But there are many things in the world to wonder at. - J. E. Island Economics

Regarding the efforts being made to get industries to locate on Vancouver It is not economic to have industries on" an island which has free trade with the mainland if the raw materials have to be imported. Vancouver Island industries forestry, fishing, tourism and some mining. Industries drawing on these resources could flourish. The industries where the raw materials are on the mainland can obviously produce more

British industry is the same. Before joining the European Common Market, British industry could flourish on imported raw materials which were also needed for war purposes. Now that Britain has free trade with Europe, her industries, except perhaps light industries, can no longer compete and are dying, starting with ship building. North Sea oil will make no difference in the long run.

The same applies to Japan which is only able to keep ahead by very hard work which the coming generations will not tolerate. - H. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach

Death Cells

THE GLOBE and MAIL

With prisons like the death chambers we operate in Canada, who needs capital

Last December, five prisoners died in a fire at the Stratford Jail. The cellblock was understaffed by guards at the time of the fire; the guards couldn't get the keys to unlock all the cells; flammable mattresses had been stacked in a corridor of the cellbock; local firemen weren't familiar with the jail's floorplan. Stupid carelessness.

Problem With Keys

And now, in another province, 20 men have perished in another fire in another jail. fire department report recommended four years ago that the Saint John, N.B., City Jail be equipped with a sprinkler system. It wasn't. done. And, again, there were problems with keys and locks. Twenty men died, for such of-fences as drinking under age.

In Saskatchewan, one prisoner has been killed and 24 others taken to hospital after a hostage-taking incident at the Prince Albert provincial jail.

When we put a man behind number of reasons: to him, to deter others from crime or, simply, to get the poor devil off the street. We re acting, we tell ourselves, in well, we certainly aren't acting in the interest of the public good.

Did they walk off the job last Oct. 14 during the labor movement's mass protest against wage and price controls? No, they did not. In fact, one trade union leader who tried to conbring down the walls of vince them to change their minds said later it was like Hotel Vancouver workers talking to management.

What provoked a nonmilitant bunch like this - a great many of whose 475 members have never walked a picket line before in their lives to vote 90 per cent in favor of strike action, five percentage points higher than the strike vote just taken by B.C.'s tough

Since hotel negotiators showed no inclination to change their bargaining posi-tion, there was little the staff could do but strike.

The attitude on the picket line during those first few hours was calm and relaxed with most of the pickets hoping for an early return to work They had no objections to management personnel already on staff working overtime to keep the hotel running.

But the dispute quickly escalated into bitterness when the hotel decided to hire strikebreakers in spite of grave warnings from B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer Len Guy that such a move would spark an all-out confrontation with the labor move-

Why should the Hotel Vancouver want this fight? One can only speculate about possible corporate manoeuvring between Hilton which runs the hotel and the federal government's Canadian National Railways which owns it, but the argument that it is trying to save money doesn't add up. In this kind of dispute the hotel loses far more in current and future business than it ever ould by tossing its employees an extra 20 cents an hour.

As for so-called violence on the picket line, there has been very little, considering the hostility of the strikers to those working at their former jobs.

Yes - for about 90 minutes last Thursday some guests were unable to force their way into the hotel through a large throng of labor supporters, but that is not an unexpected oc-currance on a mass picket line and it is certainly a long way from what can be called violent

On the other hand, there are many allegations from union pickets about abuse and objects tossed at them by the hotel's own security and management

Thursday's huge picket line soon melted away without any prodding from the police, whose attitude may well be likened to that of officers dur-ing a large rock concert refraining in the interests of over-all crowd control from arresting one dope-smoking youth amidst thousands of excited rock fans.

Deputy-chief Tom Dixon was correct when he pointed out the hotel should seek a court injunction if there are problems from union picketing, but perhaps the hotel is afraid of being cross-examined on its own behavior during the strike.

Market Squeeze

European Common Market na-tions, who persistently deplore their collective inability to impose political weight on a world scale, now confront a sparkling opportunity.

Greece, Portugal and Spain

Western Europe's newest and shakiest democracies are knocking at the com-munity's door, convinced that market membership will serve as a barrier to home-grown

Ideas Transmitted

The trading system of the community carries not only the goods but also the ideas of members from one to another. And finally, an economic crisis that might encourage a coup could be alleviated by aid from West Germany and other alarmed community partners.

West German diplomat here brushed aside the possible financial burden. Recalling recent fears that an anarchic Portugal would be taken over by leftist extremists, he said: "Think what we would have paid two years ago to have the Portugal that we have

The Greek ambassador to the nine here, Stephane Stathatos, says, "This is a challenge for the nine. They must show the outside world their principles are not dead words, that they are not a club of the rich. The frustration of the Greek people would be insupportable" if the application failed.

Once the Greeks are in, it will be hard to deny the others. Portugal applied this spring and Spain is expected to put in its bid at the end of the sum-

The negotiating minuet for Madrid will be the stateliest of all. Spanish citrus-growers can undersell the French and Italians by as much as 40 per cent. The expectation here is that the bargaining over Spain's bid could take four years.

The French, with some support from the Italians, have in typical fashion used the enlargement issue to press for added protection for their own Mediterranean growers.

The market now is burdened price supports and subsidies that raise food costs and create lakes of wine and mountains of surplus butter and beef.

In the end, however, almost everyone here predicts that the French and Italian growers will somehow be bought off and that the three new demplace in the community.

It's Hell Being an Adult

Well, ladies, it so happens that David Harriman, 42, of Toronto has addressed himself to this exact question, and here's

STRAY harold hosford

Back in the days of my misspent youth I once invested a couple of dollars in a little gizmo that has been touted as "the answer to a birdwatcher's prayers." My investment consisted of a wooden tube about an inch long and half an inch in diameter. Into the tube was inserted a short metal spindle. The spindle protruded from each end of the tube and had a ring on one end — for looping a bit of string into so that the thing could be carried conveniently around the neck - and a bulb-like thickening at the other end which ensured that spin-dle and tube would always be one.

The purpose of this little gizmo was to make noises—tiny, squeaking noises—noises that were supposed to be irresistible to birds, that would bring them out of the bush in, hoards where they could be "watched" at the birdwatcher's

To create this miraculous state of affairs one had only to twist the spindle within the tube, binding the metal and wood from time to time to produce a squeak. Said squeak was supposed to put the birds at the mercy of the birdwatcher.

Called a "squeaker" because of its characteristic sound, that little piece of human ingenuity has been part of my birding paraphernalia for longer than I care to divulge. And in all those years, I could count on one hand the birds it has called-up — which may be more a reflection of my technique than of any inherent weakness in the concept.

At any rate, my "squeaker" long ago fell into disuse and, until a visit to Burnaby's Heritage Village last weekend, was forgotten.

My "squeaker" was brought back to mind when a ruckus erupted in a row of cedars just outside the Village. At first, all that could be heard was the sharp, insistent, alarm notes of a half-a-dozen robins. I figured they'd got cat problems, or maybe owl problems, but a deep, throaty caw from deep among the eedars identified the cause of the commotion. The robins had crow problems

But what struck me most about the performance was the lack of concern shown by the other birds — chickadees, swallows and starlings - that were in the area at the time. They continued to go about their chores and showed little or no regard for the problems of the robins.

I listened for a minute or two and just when I'd decided there was nothing more to be gained from the exercise, a tremendous furore erupted. The robins simply went wild, screaming and darting in and out of the branches. And now the chickadees and swallows joined the fray, the former flitting nervously among the branches uttering concerned little dee-dees, the latter dashing around the outside of the trees chattering agitatedly.

Even the starlings, which had up to then remained stead-fastly uninvolved, added their rasping alarm notes from the safety of a nearby maple

What had brought on this sudden change where one mo-ment the robins had been left to their own devices, the next they were joined by all the other birds around. Well, something had happened. A new sound had been introduced into the performance - the shrill, vibrant "chir-rup" of a young robin. I can only assume — the screen of cedar boughs denied me any chance of seeing — that the youngster, true to its instincts, had remained motionless and hidden throughout the altercation but when the crow got too close, fear took over and the youngster moved, uttering its shrill alarm as it did. The result I have already described: pandemonium!

There was something in the quality of that young bird's call that signalled danger to the chickadees and swallows, that made them abandon caution and expose themselves.

To put your mind at ease, the story closed on a happy To put your mind at ease, the story closed on a happy note. The commotion was apparently too much for the crow. It was seen to depart, empty-handed and in some haste, and soon quiet reigned again. But I could not forget the change brought about by the sudden call of that young robin, a change which suggested a reason for my earlier lack of success with my "squeaker." All I had to do was imitate the call of a toware hird in distress and "all you prevers would be call of a young bird in distress and "all my prayers would be

Now, if I can only find the "squeaker."

It's Canada's Choice.

PERSPECTIVES

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON As recently as 12 and 15 years ago we pastors used to tell one another on Monday morning how big our congregations had been on Sunday. But more recently our ten-dency has been simply to tell one another on Monday morn-ing "Good morning," and later to confess to one another, in soft voices, that they other, in soft voices, that they don't come like they used to.

We clergy who are now comfortably into rhiddle age and beyond remember how gratifying, and how ego-coddling, it was to take services back in the elate 40s and the 50s, when in most churches a worshipper had to get there quite early in order to get a back seat. The midweek services which some of us provided for weekenders were not, generally, conspicuously not, generally, conspicuously

There is now little worldly benefit in attending church, and few people feel that they should attend in order to au-thenticate their respectability. A life insurance salesman told me that it was no longer as helpful as it once was for a man in his business to have an acitve church connection.

My impression is that most people who now attend church regularly do so from simple religious motives - and Ifin it hard to think that that can be a change for the worse.

There is some evidence that circumstances are again changing. Recent polls and surveys indicate that the decline in attendance at services of worship may have levelled

The area around Koukounaries is fertile and wheat fields and olive groves abound. For the hardy, a 40 minute hike takes you to Mandraki, an unspoiled stretch of coastline; a shorter walk

The marriage was the first for Melcher and the second for his wife.

Dr. Noe Authier of Rapid City, S.D., was cutting timber with a chain saw in the nearby Black Hills two weeks ago when "all of a sudden I saw my hand on the ground," he said. His 12-year-old son Marchad read an article about surgeons at Jewish Hospital here who specialize in reattaching severed limbs. The article noted that the limbs, when cut off "cleanly," should be packed in ice for preserva-tion, and that is what Marc did with his father's hand. Explorer in Music Enjoys Digging Into Past Treasures

BY AUDREY JOHNSON Times Staff

Lean tanned Erich Schwandt with the long lithe fingers and the intense, humor-lit man-ner, likes to think of himself as "an explorer in music" — not the kind of explorer who pioneers new areas so much as the kind who digs into the past and discovers treasure previously unknown or forgot-

His special areas of interest are the 17th and 18th cen-turies in keyboard and vocal music. This focus took shape when he went to Stanford University to study harpsichord and became a pupil of Put-nam Aldrich, outstanding stu-dent of Wanda Landowska, the renowned artist who re-vived interest in the harp-sichord as a viable concert in-

When Aldrich died he left his 1926 Pleyel harpsichord to his star pupil together with a fine library that included comprehensive treatises on 17th and 18th century music. The Pleyel instruments, made in Paris, are among the world's most famous and this one has a special significance in that it toured the world with Landowska and has her name imprinted on it along with the maker's.

The instrument is "in residence" at University of Victoria where Schwandt teaches toria where Senwandt teaches music history, performance practice, bibliography and second year theory as well as harpsichord. (He has a second Pleyel at home.)

On Tuesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. Schwandt and the Pleyel will be part of a chamber concert, first of a (Czech-born and interna-tionally noted, Komorous suc-ceeds retiring Phillip Young this week.) Schwandt thinks the development of UVic's music de-partment is coming well and will be much encouraged by the new music wing and the 1,300 seat concert hall which will be part of the University Centré building, expected to be completed early in 1978.

"University schools are best when they are nurtured along slowly," he says. "You can't give a $100,000 gift and get an instant department."

Concerning his interest in the music of the Mozartean and pre-Mozartean periods, it is the French and Italian schools that intrigue him particularly.

"There is such a great quantity of music — lovely music — that is unknown," he tells you. "Delightful songs and dances, charming and intricate instrumentation." I had the great good fortune to work with a wonderful singer at Eastman and we did a lot recording together

The scene is inside Pacific Western Airline's $3.3-million flight simulator.

The airline installed the Boeing 737 simulator late last year and received Transport Canada approval to operate it in January.

The complex, computer-cor trolled electronics system contains a combination of dials, buttons and levers which duplicate those in the 117-passenger 737 jet.

Ferries Cut Losses by $10M Reduction in Frills Credited

The B.C. Ferry Corp. ended its first three months of operation March 31, 1977, with a loss of only $6.6 million, more than $10 million less than last year, a report tabled in the legislature Thursday

The first financial statement for the new Crown corporation, tabled by Transport and Communication Minister Jack Davis, showed a reduction in expenditure of 35 per cent in the first three months of 1976 when the ferries were run by the B.C. Ferry Author

Ferry traffic was down 20

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP We'd like to say a few words about planting ornamentals and vegetables together. In theory it sounds fine. Some vegetables make charming decorative notes in the border or as ground covers. Carrots, rhubarb, chard and kale come to mind. Also, it's easy to find a place for a few plants of them here and there.

But let's face it, you have two very different aims in growing them. Vegetables are grown to be eaten; ornamen-tals are grown to be looked at. If you combine the two you find yourself creating great gaps in your garden scheme because the carrots natured and out they came.
Also, vegetables need to be given extra attention to get the most from them. That's not so easy when they're part

So our suggestion is to keep them separate; they'll both thank you for it. But meanwhile, take another look at your vegetable garden layout. Couldn't it look a lot better? We don't mean just keeping it weed-free and neatly raked How about putting in some beds, outlining them with brick or wood? This kind of framework makes any planting look more important, and a garden laid out in such beds has a pleasing over-all design in all seasons.

There are some plants that do excel in an ornamental way. The eggplant is one. It's a shame to bury it in the back corner of the garden. We even wish people would use its French name, aubergine. Then there are the decorative kales, so marvelously colored and crisped that you want to frame them, not eat them. And we'd like to put in a word for one of our favorite fruit trees, the Bonanza peach. This dwarf prodigy literally bursts with blooms in the spring, then bears an astonishing number of full-size ffuit that make good eating. And it also has a natural "bonsaj" look to it that is especially attractive in winter when the boughs are bare.

And what's prettier than a grape vine?

So it's a matter of making the best of two worlds. Then

DEAR DR. MILLER: Mar vin, my moth, committed sulcide by flying into a candle my mother had lit. Selfimmolation I think they call it. It was not a protest, as far as I know, just stupidity. That's my question. How come. Mother Nature hasn't made moths smarter? Marvin, and millions of others wouldn't be self - destructing around light bulbs or open flame. - J.E

DEAR J.E.: Men (and women, too) have been fooling Mother nature. It's not nice, oftentimes. Take poor Marvin, for example. His reaction to stimuli was instituted long before light bulbs; or even candles, became a haz-ard. So far, Mother Nature tropic (attracted to light). That would be rushing th Odds are, she won't bother anyway.

DEAR DR. MILLER: have two large ivy plants suspended from the ceiling. They're in big pots and my cats love to jump up and lie in them. So far, it hasn't hurt the plants any; they're pretty tough, apparently. Friends have warned me that ivy might poison my cats, except they never eat the stuff. Could they be poisoned by just lying on some of the potted ivy leaves? - N.J.

DEAR N.J.: It's unlikely your cats could derive enough toxic principle from the plant leaves to poison themselves by simply lying on it. But remember you have no assurance they won't sample some in the future simply because they apparently haven't so far. These aerial potted plant perches offer an additional hazard unless those ceiling If your cats could be potted permanently if the ivy fell

DEAR DR. MILLER: Hoppy's my sister's one and a half-legged barn owl. She gave me Wheezer, her cat. when she got Hoppy. She thinks Hoppy can see better in the dark than Wheezer because barn owls dive and cap-ture mice in the dark. Is she right for once? - C.F.

DEAR C.F.: Barn owls DO dive and capture mice in the dark all right, but it's not entirely a matter of keen eye-sight. Barn owls use the facial disc feathers (those around the eyes) to help amplify periodic "pips" emitted by mice, and thus home in on their target. If the owl's auditory (hearing) system is interfered with, the accuracy of the aerial attacks will drop con-

There comes a day when students, brides bachelors, students, and career girls have to do their laundry for the first time.

The "Facts of Laundry" explains some basic rules which assure satisfactory results. For instance, clothes should be sorted according to color and fabric. Whites must be separated from bright or dark colors. White cotton, linen and underwear need hot water and vigorous washing, wool-lens and dark colors require cold water and brief washing. while permanent press fabrics need special treatment to prevent wrinkles

There are tips on how to get each load ready to be washed. Dirt and lint should be brushed out of cuffs; zippers should be closed and hooks hooked. Pockets should be emptied and tears mended before laundering. Heavy soil on collars, cuffs, etc., should be pretreated according to instructions.

You will also learn the proper use of laundry products such as detergents, bleaches and fabric softeners. Fabric softeners eliminate static cling from permanent press garments and those made of nylon, polyester and acrylic as well as minimize wrinkling and render the fabric fluffy

The pamphlet warns beginners not to overload the washer. This may result in poor extra wear on fabrics.

Just Who Is Imprisoned 'John Doe'?

By CLAUDE ADAMS Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON - Aspiring terrorist, smuggler of allens or simply a schizoid-dreamer? The case of the man they call John Doe has baffled both U.S. and Canadish an authorities in one of the weirdest criminal cases on re-

No one is certain who he is. this 24-year-old man now being kept in a institution for the criminally insane near

His trail seemed to lead from Trinidad to two addresses in Toronto, then to Syracuse, N.Y., and finally to Washington, where police raided his apartment last year and found high powered guns, material for letter bombs, a mass of stolen documents, and clippings on prom-inent Americans, including Senator Ted Kennedy, Jackie Onassis, Henry Kissinger and various senators and congressmen.

To this day, he stands by a number of false identities, refusing to divulge his real name or background. Several U.S. agencies, the RCMP and a number of local police departments have tried to crack his story, with little apparent

In what police believe are efforts to escape trial on criminal charges, he twice at-tempted suicide, "They didn't seem genuine." said one Washington detective. "He tried to drown himself in a

What really stymies auth-orities on both sides of the border are a number of letters to a Toronto address which he tried to smuggle out of a Maryland jail.

O'ne of the letters, addressed to a "Shafficool Mohammed" at 23 Ahllam Street, Toronto, contains this eryptic admonition: "I am in a lot of trouble. No one knows who I am . . . call the folks in Syracuse . tell them to throw away all my letters and all the papers and typewriters I got in the basement. They found everyone's name and address in my room in Wash-

"Also ask the old man to hide his transformer out of the house. You do the same J., just keep kook (sic) man. I am a mistery (sic) to these people. Tell everyone to put a freeze on my letters."

Another letter, also inter-cepted by police, warns: "Call central location, tell them to get rid of everything

Tell them you don't know who kidnapping and various bombor where I am."

Canada while fleeing police some years ago.

The letter was signed RCMP questioned Shafficool and even though he never-re-ceived the letters intended for him, he said he knew nothing about an "Akim."

And, in a field near the home of one Rasul Mohammed in Syracuse, police found a device that allows a person to make long-distance telephone calls which are un-traceable.

But there was no other evidence. Police here say they have spent "thousands" of man-hours on the investigation, and interviewed literally hundreds of people. "But we still don't know who he is."

RCMP officers working on the case reported him to be Akim Mohammed, son of a Trinidadian immigrant to Canada who now lives in Syracuse. There is also some evidence that he may have heen involved with a ring that been involved with a ring that transported illegal aliens into the U.S. through Canada and supplied them with false iden-tities. RCMP spokesmen could not be reached for comment.

But a Baltimore-based im migration investigator Paul Pickering, speculates that John Doe might have been trying to form a terrorist ring of former military men.

Among the documents found in his Washington apartment were a number of dossiers on U.S. servicemen who had re-ceived dishonorable dis-charges from the forces.

"If you wanted to start a terrorist group, you could re-ally set up quite an organiza-tion with these ex-soldiers," Pickering said in an inter-

Supporting this theory was the assortment of articles found in the raid on his apartment last fall: a machine-gun, a shotgun with a "night scope" attached, a revolver with shoulder holster, letterbomb ingredients, and a book on incendiary devices.

"He tested smoke bombs in his, bathroom," Pickering added.

addresses and other information on high-ranking U.S. government figures. Names and addresses of two persons living in Jonquiere, Que., were also in the book. As well, he had clippings on the Charles Manson killings in California, the Patty Hearst

Police also found two Canadian social insurance cards, one made out to Randy Wil-liam Johnston (456-805-381) and the other to Akim Mo-hammed (449-926-203).

Washington detective John Powers Jr. said he had copies of letters between John Doe and the Canadian government between John the Manual the Canadian government to the manual the canadian said the manual the said and the Canadian govern-ment, showing that the man had virtually intimidated the government info supplying him with a card, even though authorities were concerned about his true identity.

After the man wrote an "indignant" letter to Ottawa, "he received a reply from the Ca-nadian government with their profoundest apologies for any errors on their part, and they promptly issued him a new account number," Det. Pow-

The macabre story came out Wednesday at a Senate compittee hearing into the problem of false identities, and when Canada was mentioned, some observers fetioned, some observers fe-called how James Earl Ray, the convicted killer of Martin Luther King, had little dif-ficulty getting passports in Det. Powers told the com-mittee that John Doe, as he is listed on police records, was arrested in Maryland after allegedly passing a forged cheque. He gave a false name— David Edmond Allard, actually a man serving a prison sen-tence in North Dakota — but. ton address.

Doe had worked in the Washington area under one or an-other assumed names, as a private security guard as-signed to various posts, in-cluding the White House Clemency Board offices.

It was there, police say, that he stole the dossiers of the ex-soldiers who had been appealing for changes in their discharge papers.

Also in his possession was a badge identifying him as a sergeant of the White House police force.

A Maryland judge refused to try the case, however, after a medical report described him as a "severe schizoid and very dangerous." Furthermore, he would not reveal his true identity so John Doe was

Look at the sun through a polished piece of British Columbia jade. You'll see a special colour. The translucent green of a west coast rainforest. Deep, mossy, flecked with light and shadow. It's a colour you won't find anywhere else in the world.

Today, the Bay has assembled a beautiful collection of British Columbia jade. Pendants, earrings, brooches, rings, and bracelets, along with exquisite wildlife carvings. We invite you to see them for yourself. Hold a piece up to the light, touch its cool smoothness. We think you'll understand why British Columbia jade is a very special kind of stone.

sowings of carrots, peas, and potatoes were confined to one area, and succession sowing followed to suit the family's needs, there is now space available where the early crops were removed.

But where gardening is based on farming practices, that is, sowing the entire plot on one day and leaving everything to reach market maturity, it is often difficult to find any vacant spaces.

tinue to sow at 10 to 15 day intervals until the end of August, we consider July 15 as the deadline for the fall sowings. This gives us time to dig over the rows where the seed will be sown, incorporate humus, check the stock of seed on hand, and obtain seeds we need.

The vegetables which mature in 75 days or less will most likely be the same varieties sown in early spring, so that any leftover seed from that sowing can be used now. There are two we are not likely to have on hand, the Rutabaga, of Laurentian purple-top turnip, and the spring cabbage Flower-of-spring. The rutabaga is always sown here in mid-July and the first roots gathered around mid-September when the size of tennis balls. For sweet and tender roots this type of turnip must grow rapidly without any weather checking, something we cannot prevent in our variable springs.

Checking through the seed catalog every wise gardener keeps on hand for reference and information, we find dozens of vegetables which fit into our 75 day maturing

There are several varieties of dwarf beans, many types of carrots, bunching onions, a half dozen lettuce varieties, three hybrid dwarf sweet corn, Swiss chard, celtuce, spinach in two types, corn-salad, white summer turnips, dwarf early peas, the white and golden beets, the Winter

Dig into the central and lower parts of the compost heap and remove the rotted portions and put through a half-inch mesh screen to make it suitable for seed sow-

Don't put peatmoss into the vegetable garden. Peat moss makes soil acid and vegetables hate an acid soil.

Loosen the soil in rows where the seed will be sown and incorporate plenty of compost. There is no purpose in digging or adding precious compost to walks between the vegetables in spring they matured in mid to late June. Sown in July they will mature in the latter part of Sep-tember when temperatures are about the same. The big the soil at the time of sowing. In spring we are fighting cold

Now we have bone dry soil, 24 to 48 hour germination, fast seedling growth, with the need for shading, and judicious dampening, not deep watering.

Because of these reversed conditions we must have that all-important screened com-post in which to sow the seeds so that sufficient moisture is held in the top two inches of soil for good germination and to start the seedlings with steady, strong growth.

Next in importance to moisture-holding compost is temporary shade — during the germination period and while during the the seedlings are getting their roots established. The shade is, to reduce heat on the soil, so don't use black plastic which increases heat and prevents air circulation. Another warning; don't lay boards flat on the soil over the seed rows. If you do hundreds of insects will gather in the coolness and moisture under the boards and the seadlings will disappear as fast as they poke through the soil.
